Introduction to Office Ergonomics 25th-26th September 2010

Course Aims:

The Association of Chartered Physiotherapists in Occupational Health & Ergonomics (ACPOHE) is a special interest group of the Chartered Society of Physiotherapy. ACPOHE has been running courses for physiotherapists who have a specialist interest in the fields of occupational health and ergonomics for many years. This two day Workstation (DSE) Ergonomics for Physiotherapists course designed for physiotherapists who have had limited or no experience in the area of conducting office ergonomics assessments or who are looking for a refresher.

After this course the participant should be able to:

1. Demonstrate an understanding of relevant Health & Safety legislation & regulations, relevant to office workers, particularly computer users.
2. Demonstrate an understanding of other relevant legislation.
3. Demonstrate an understanding of the risk factors associated with work related upper limb disorders (WRULDs).
4. Demonstrate an understanding of relevant consent and confidentiality issues.
5. Feel competent to conduct a comprehensive office workstation ergonomics assessment and design an action plan which aims to reduce risk and promote health.
6. Carry out basic anthropometric measurements and be able to advise on the type, size and functionality of office furniture and equipment that is suitable for a user.
7. Prepare a clear and logical report of the assessment and recommendations made that meets all of the needs of the referrer.

Pre Course

Delegates should have a sound grasp of anatomy, work physiology, biomechanics and posture relevant to ergonomics. Pre-course preparation is required and a reading list will be provided.

Presenter

Kathy Lewis is a Chartered Physiotherapist and has been working in the field of occupational health and ergonomics for 12 years. She gained an MSc in Health Ergonomics from the University of Surrey in 2002. Kathy currently works in the NHS and in many private sector organizations.
